Solving the Puzzle of E-Commerce:

By Jason Lorge and Wijaya Thamrin

Amazon.com, Ebay.com, E-Toys.com..., the list is going on... and on... and on... Why is everyone talking about E-commerce? How does one go about setting up an E-commerce system? What are the components of an online store? How do these components work together to actually sell products over the Internet?

Jason Lorge and Wijaya Thamrin will be presenting an E-commerce system that is being implemented for a student organization at Cal State Fullerton. The speakers will present an overview of the project, some E-commerce design alternatives, and the necessary components an online store. The speakers will then demonstrate how the web pages, database, shopping cart, and credit card transactions are integrated into an electronic retail site.

Speaker Profile:

Jason Lorge is a graduating MIS student at CSU, Fullerton. Jason is currently working as a network specialist at CSU, Fullerton School of Communication. He is a member of CSUF AITP, and the present president of the CSUF Golden Key National Honor Society.

Wijaya "Wi" Thamrin is a graduating MIS student at CSU, Fullerton. He enjoys system analysis and design, database design and programming, and, of course, E-commerce/Web Site development. Wijaya's professional experience includes developing database systems and web sites for on-campus and local organizations. Wijaya is also active in the Cal State Fullerton AITP Student Chapter and served as vice president.
